City Council supports Veterans and Human Services Levy
King County Primary and Special Election is August 16

Snoqualmie, WA – The Snoqualmie City Council unanimously passed Resolution 1009 on July 25, 2011 stating its support for King County Proposition No. 1, the Veterans and Human Services Levy, on the ballot for the upcoming King County Primary and Special Election.

The Veterans and Human Services Levy provides $13.3 million each year through 2011. The levy expires at the end of 2011; therefore, it has been placed on the election ballot for countywide action.

The programs supported by levy funds have served more than 82,000 King County residents through 2010 at a cost of less than $15 per year for the average King County household. The levy revenue is divided equally to provide services to veterans, military personnel and their families (Veterans Levy Fund) and other individuals and families in need (Human Services Fund). Federal and state budget reductions will likely affect local veterans and human services programs.

The full proposition statement is on the King County elections website and page 57 of the King County Official Local Voters' Pamphlet.
